Although critical thinking is a healthy or positive thought process, it does not involve judging something negatively. Every time a choice needs to be made regarding a situation that involves more than one possible answer, critical thinking must be used. Critically analyzing requires trustworthy data and proof so that a choice can be made in accordance with scientific principles. A critical thinking process includes elements such as personal experience, fundamental intuition, and engineering reasoning. Critical thinking entails considering many options and formulating well-thought-out queries. It helps to have a little bit of skepticism when thinking critically and assessing the evidence. After carefully assessing the advantages and disadvantages, a decision must be made.

Topics Covered:

- Recognizing arguments
- Propositional logic and truth-functional connectives
- Inductive reasoning
- The nature of causal reasoning
- Abductive reasoning and inference to the best

Finding direction is the dictionary definition of orientation. Academic and personal success are goals for the pupils. Orientation plays a significant influence in fostering that achievement because new students require direction and assistance while enrolling in classes, orientation programmes start before classes ever begin. The programme will serve as the foundation for the students' smooth transition from the classroom to the collegiate setting. The pupils who have received a thorough and efficient orientation programme will realise the abilities required for success.

Topics Covered:

- Feel Confidence About their Future.
- Be Well-Prepared to Meet the Demands of Collegiate Academics.
- Comprehend the Setting that the Engineering Institution has supplied for them.

Identification, analysis, and implementation of the best solutions are all aspects of problem-solving abilities. An employee who is good at solving problems is both a self-starter and a cooperative team member, they are proactive in identifying the source of a problem and collaborate with others to consider a variety of solutions before deciding how to proceed.

Topics Covered:

- Identify the Problem
- Problem-solving and decision-making models
- How to use decision-making strategies
- Establishing a context for success
- Framing the issue properly
- Choosing the best option

Students can explore their creative talents and engage with the outside world through creative arts programmes. Studying for a creative arts and design degree abroad might give completely different perspective on student subject matter because art and design are intricately related to culture. Studying in the nation are really interested in can give unmatched access to materials like paintings, writing, and sculpture. While the majority of courses will give a background in all types of art and design, which helps to bridge cultural gaps. If student want to create functional art and become a designer, there are design courses accessible in areas like fashion design, graphic design, fashion and textiles, and even product design.

Topics Covered:

- Introduction to creative arts and designs programs
- Reasons to study Creative arts and designs courses
- Graphic designs
- 3D animation
- Carrier opportunities
